How it Works:

The sealing force in the Water Swiggler™ drinking valve comes from a silicone rubber diaphragm, which provides the pressure necessary to hold the valve closed. The head of the stem is held securely against the o-ring by the elastic force of the diaphragm. This prevents water from flowing under the stem head and out of the valve. Water is released only when the animal moves the stem in any direction by biting or licking. Most animals and birds learn to use the drinking valve very quickly.
